Volunteers ordered to reveal finances

By MARGOT PETIT NICHOLS

SOME CARMEL residents who serve on the Committee for Art in Public Places (CAPP) were stunned this week to learn that they must reveal detailed personal financial information to the public — or quit their volunteer positions.

Carmel City Attorney Don Freeman told CAPP members that they must fill out California Form 700, a Fair Political Practices Commission document and return it promptly to the city. The document asks for details on personal income, investments and assets. It would go into the public record and be available for perusal by anyone who asks.

Although the seven-member CAPP was established in January 1997 under the city's Community and Cultural Commission, no guidelines were ever laid down for the watchdog group charged with reviewing art offered for donation to the city, updating an inventory of city-owned art and planning a public art exhibition in Carmel.

Friction developed between the Cultural Commission and CAPP as the group — composed of artists, art historians, pro-

Look for new right-turn lane onto Highway 1

CONSTRUCTION OF a second right-turn lane from Carmel Valley Road to Highway 1 could begin this fall, Caltrans officials said after Tuesday's approval of the widening project by the Monterey County Board of Supervisors.

The board voted 4 to 1 to approve the new turn lane after a hearing sharply divided public testimony about the merits of the plan.

"The only traffic solution that makes any sense is the Hatton Canyon parkway," said Carmel resident David Loye.

Riane Eisler, a retired attorney who lives in Carmel, argued that the widening project would actually make the traffic jams that beset residents of the Highlands even worse. "All this does is put more traffic on Highway 1," she said.

But Lucy Willman, marketing director of The Crossroads Shopping Center, said that traffic studies done for the Hatton Canyon Business Group show that the project will alleviate congestion.

Supervisor Dave Potter said he strongly supported the turn lane, because "People are tired of waiting for traffic solutions."

Supervisor Simon Salinas said he felt obligated to support the lane. "I've voted for some development projects in Carmel Valley, and in my mind this turning lane was going to be there," he said.

Who is Dr. Laura Pasten?

By KIRSTIE WILDE

SHE'S BEEN on the front page of local newspapers and on television news shows. She's testified at public meetings in Pacific Grove and Carmel — and is suing the city of Pacific Grove, its city council and its police chief, Scott Miller, for what she calls the city's "killing spree."

She says she hopes that P.G. will be fined "several hundred thousand dollars" for trapping and killing some of the town's numerous raccoons, and she's denigrated the credentials of a scientist brought in by the Monterey County Health Department to handle an outbreak of raccoon-borne disease.

Dr. Pasten poses with Morris the 9-Lives cat in this 1987 publicity photo. She said she got the job of caring for the famous cat after she was "picked as the best Veterinarian in the entire United States."

Laura Pasten, D.V.M.

News reports have called her a "Carmel veterinarian," yet she does not have a veterinary practice here and was virtually unknown in the city before all the raccoon publicity hit.

In fact, Dr. Laura Pasten seemed to appear out of nowhere.

But The Pine Cone has learned that Dr. Pasten has a remarkable, colorful history — accompanied by plenty of controversy, publicity and exaggerated self-promotion.

Ads announced her arrival

"Morris, the 9-Lives cat's, Veterinarian is Now a Carmel Resident — AND Recipient of the Lifetime Achievement Award," trumpeted an ad Dr. Pasten bought for herself in the Monterey County Herald on March 20, 1994.

The ad announced her arrival in the area and was packed with information about her accomplishments.

The "Lifetime Achievement Award," it said, was "a gold plated Oscar . . . inscribed 'Golden Academy Award for Lifetime Achievement' . . . honoring her for her contributions to Veterinary Medicine and

Carmel hero halts fiery murder

By TAMARA GRIPPI

THE CARMEL tow truck driver who unknowingly put a deadly weapon in the hands of a disturbed Pebble Beach man this week turned out to be the hero who saved the lives of an elderly couple.

Stewart Hopkins, an employee of Carmel Chevron, responded to a call for a delivery of some gasoline to the home of Meyer and Lee Katz Feb. 8.

The couple's disturbed son, Kenneth Katz, 42, allegedly doused his mother with the gasoline while she was cooking in her kitchen in an attempt to set her on fire.

When his father intervened, Katz hit him on the head with a mirror and stomped and kicked him after he fell to the ground.

The couple was saved by Hopkins, who had waited outside after delivering the gasoline used in

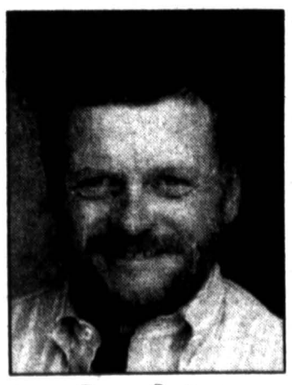
SCRAMBLE FOR THE COASTAL COMMISSION

By PAUL MILLER

ALMOST 200 people — including Melanie Billig and Bill Monning of Carmel and Gary Tate of Carmel Valley — have submitted applications to be appointed to the California Coastal Commission by Governor Gray Davis, sources close to the commission said this week.



Dave Potter

Supervisor Dave Potter, who has started a campaign to get Assembly Speaker Antonio Villaraigosa to reappoint him to the commission, said, "it's certainly not for the money" that so many people want to serve on the important coastal body. Coastal commissioners work long hours and receive minimal compensation.

"We are caught in a developmental sandwich here in Monterey County, with pressure coming from the south and from the north, and it's very important for us to have representation on the coastal commission," Potter said.

He said he will be asking the Carmel City Council, the Board of Supervisors and other government bodies in Monterey and Santa Cruz counties to recommend him for reappointment.

"I think I've done a good job protecting our coastline and I certainly want to stay on the commission," said Potter, who was appointed to what he thought was a four-year term in 1997.

Melanie Billig

The Coastal Commission, which has vast powers to regulate development along California's 1,000-mile coastline — has 12 members, four appointed by the Governor, four by the assembly speaker and four by the president pro tem of the California Senate.

Governor Davis, a Democrat, inherited four Pete Wilson appointees when he took office in January. One of those commissioners — San Luis Obispo Supervisor Mike Ryan — was fired by Davis last month. He is widely expected to soon replace the other three, including Monterey businessman fessors and collectors — went about its work.

As the inventory progressed, a number of valuable pieces of art could not be found. When CAPP went public about the missing art, the Community and Cultural Committee objected that the announcement was made without its permission. Carmel Mayor Ken White viewed CAPP's concern that art works were missing as a matter of opinion, not of fact.

In the ensuing months, Asian art expert Robert Fisher and art historian Betty Hoag McGlynn resigned from CAPP. Cultural Commissioner Elizabeth Ungaretti accused CAPP of working "in secret" without advising the commission.

Friction between CAPP and the Cultural Commission continued as CAPP pursued art matters which the commission considered its business.

On Feb. 9, Mayor White thanked CAPP members for serving almost two years without the help of official guidelines. "The city let you down," he said, "I don't want to hide that. But now we have a good policy and the council has passed it."

"In the beginning," the mayor continued, "we set no budget or staff, just indicated that you were under the Cultural Commission." He praised CAPP for being willing to do the work of searching out long-forgotten city-owned art that was stored "in closets with spider webs,." among other places.

Freeman emphasized that CAPP members must follow the Brown (open meeting) Act to the letter and disclose their personal finances.

Form 700 is the same financial disclosure form required of the governor, members of the Assembly, all mayors, council members and planning commissioners.

City Administrator Jere Kersnar said Carmel requires financial disclosure from all members of standing committees, and said it was "an oversight" that CAPP members weren't required to fill out Form 700 when they started work in 1997.

There was a palpable sense of unrest at the end of the meeting as several CAPP members — all of whom are unpaid volunteers — expressed opposition to public disclosure of their finances. Some hinted that they would resign rather than comply.

Freeman said resignations over Form 700 would be unprecedented in his experience. "I don't know of anyone who has withdrawn their service to the city rather than fill out the form," he said.

City Clerk Jeanne Brehmer said she has more than 75 completed forms on file.

CAPP members include Rodney Winfield, Miriam Rosenstein, Lacy Buck, Belinda Vidor-Holliday, Cornelia Emery, Carol Spencer and Constance Coleman.

But Potter and others were surprised when the newly elected Villaraigosa, a Democrat, announced last week that he was seeking new candidates for his four slots. The previous speaker, Cruz Bustamante, was also a Democrat.

Villaraigosa has not publicly expressed any objection to the voting records of the Bustamante appointees.

But sources close to the commission say that Villaraigosa is planning to run for Mayor of Los Angeles in 2000 and may want to use his coastal commission appointments to shore up his support in that city.

Also, the sources say, Villaraigosa and Bustamante backed different candidates in an Oakland assembly race; therefore Villaraigosa may not feel any loyalty to commissioners appointed by Bustamante.

"My main concern at this point is to help Dave [Potter] hold onto his seat," Billig said, adding she would like to win another for herself."If there's a way I could be of service helping to protect the coast then I would be really happy to do that." she said.

Candidates for the coastal commission are asked to submit a resume and fill out an application.

Billig, who was Mayor of San Luis Obispo from 1981 to 1985 and who also served four years on the Carmel planning commission, said she had not been contacted by anyone on the governor's staff since submitting her application.

Tate, who retired last year after 25 years as general manager of the Monterey Peninsula Regional Park District, also said he had not been contacted several weeks after submitting his application.

"The governor is being very deliberate and wants to make sure he appoints good people, " Potter said.

The next meeting of the California Coastal Commission will be March 9 - 12 and will be held at the Carmel Mission Inn on Rio Road.

We've protected this forest for 80 years. For the next century, we'll do the same.

Trees mean open space and natural beauty. To protect this treasure, Pebble Beach Company has already:

- Created the International Audubon Society's first California Cooperative Sanctuary golf course.
- Spent $1 million to fight pitch canker, a fungus that could destroy 85% of California's Monterey pines.
- Deeded 900 forest and coastal acres in permanent nature preserves.

We now propose limiting future growth in the Del Monte Forest even more.

Our Proposal:

Reduce Density 65% — 316 homes and a golf course instead of 889 homes that maximum zoning now allows.

Deed More Open Space — another 400 acres as permanent nature preserve — keeping more than 1,300 acres of natural open space within Del Monte Forest, forever.

Protect More Trees — We will plant a healthy new tree in the Forest for every mature tree removed and save 20,000 trees that old plans would have removed.

PASTEN

Humanity," and was "presented to Dr. Pasten" by the Dean of the U.C. Davis School of Veterinary Medicine.

Also, she had "toured with Morris, the 9-Lives cat" for nine years, was "presently writing medical mysteries," and flew her own plane, the ad said.

She concluded the ad about herself by declaring that "these qualities, along with a total commitment to and involvement in her community, render Dr. Pasten both newsworthy and noteworthy."

'Best Veterinarian in the entire United States'

But Dr. Pasten left behind plenty of controversy when she sold her veterinary practice in Grass Valley in the mid 1990s.

"She was a beautiful woman who was always grandstanding and didn't know when to quit," a veterinarian who knew her well for years, but who did not want to be identified, said about Dr. Pasten.

In 1987, Dr. Pasten's penchant for publicity got her into trouble with the American Veterinary Medical Association (AVMA). In an ad promoting her pet hospital, Pasten used a photo of herself posing with Morris the cat and boasted that she was chosen "the best Veterinarian in the entire United States" by the 9-Lives cat food company, which, she claimed, flew her back to Chicago "several times a year to check on the million-dollar pet."

After complaints from other veterinarians in Grass Valley, the AVMA informed Pasten that claims in the ad were unethical and should be deleted.

According to Bob Martwick, who took care of Morris the cat at his home near Chicago for 19 years, the famous feline's medical care was in fact provided by a Chicago-area veterinarian. Martwick said Pasten was hired to take the cat on a nation-wide publicity tour of TV shows and veterinary conventions. "Laura Pasten was a wonderful lady and did a great job promoting Morris and feline health issues, but she was never flown in to treat the cat," said Martwick.

She was released from her performance contract with 9-Lives in May, 1993, according to company spokeswoman Debbie Bolding.

Unwanted publicity

During an investigation by the Nevada County District Attorney in 1993, Dr. Pasten was accused of illegally disposing of contaminated medical waste from her veterinary hospital by burying boxes of scalpels, used needles and vials of animal blood. The case made headlines for five months in The Union, the Grass Valley newspaper.

Pasten said she was a victim of new and confusing government regulations about disposal of medical waste. She settled the case without admitting wrongdoing, but paid more than $7,000 to reimburse Nevada County and the state for the cost of the investigation and the clean-up.

"My insurance company paid all of it, and they wouldn't have paid if I was at fault," Pasten told The Pine Cone.

Ironically, Pasten says the Nevada County incident made her an "expert on improper disposal of bio-hazardous waste," which is one of the most serious accusations she is now making against the City of Pacific Grove.

"They took raccoon carcasses which they knew were contaminated with roundworm parasites and sent them to a rendering plant that makes dog food and fertilizer," Pasten charges. She said the contagious animals should have been placed in special red biohazard bags, transported by a registered hauler who tracks each carcass individually, and disposes of them in a way that ensures the difficult-to-kill parasites won't spread to humans or other animals.

"They didn't do any of that, and I'm very, very angry about it," Pasten said. "I hope they are fined at least several hundred thousand dollars."

Academic credentials

Pasten first became known to The Pine Cone when she called the newspaper to cast doubt on the credentials of Dr. William Murray — a veterinarian and microbiology professor at San José State University — who was asked to advise the Monterey County Health Department and the City of Pacific Grove on an outbreak of raccoon roundworm disease last fall.

A P.G. child, Casey Read, had been infected by the parasites and suffered permanent eye and brain damage.

Dr. Murray volunteered his time and expertise at a P.G. town meeting to educate the community about the public health dangers posed by the city's overpopulation of raccoons.

Dr. Pasten was horrified when the P.G. police started trapping and euthanizing raccoons at the request of residents. She blamed Murray for "stirring up hysteria" about raccoons, and claimed he was not an expert on raccoon-borne diseases.

She also denigrated Dr. Murray's credentials, first denying that he is a doctor of veterinary medicine and later saying that he had much less experience with animals than she had.

This week she charged that Dr. Murray's efforts in Pacific Grove were provided only to enhance his academic reputation.

"Murray needs raccoon bodies and raccoon feces to have material for studies that would lead to his master's degree or Ph.D. degree and papers which would allow him to ascend in the university world," Pasten said.

On Pasten's urging, The Pine Cone checked out Murray's credentials, which included a D.V.M. from Purdue University and a Clinical Pathology Internship and Post Doctoral Fellowship at Stanford University. The institutions involved verified all of Dr. Murray's credentials.

A similar investigation of Pasten's credentials turned up several inconsistencies, however.

Pasten claimed to have graduated Phi Beta Kappa "with straight A's" from Stanford University. She did receive her undergraduate degree under the name Shirley Jean Desmond from Stanford in 1970, but she was not awarded the prestigious Phi Beta Kappa honor, according to the university.

After questioning by The Pine Cone, Pasten removed that and other claims from her resumé, including that she graduated "No. 2 in her veterinary class at U.C. Davis," that she served on the staff of her "local human hospital for some years to help with the zoonotic diseases," that she regularly wrote articles and had radio call-in programs regarding human medicine, and all references to the Academy Award Oscar.

The Lifetime Achievement Award Pasten did receive is a trophy available upon request for $8.75 from a for-profit publishing and award-giving company called American Biographical Institute Research Association (ABIRA) in Raleigh, North Carolina.

"We sell hundreds of them every year. You can even give one as a gift," said Kim Teetson of ABIRA.

Dr. Lynette Hart of the U.C. Davis School of Veterinary Medicine said Dr. Pasten called Dean Frederick Murphy in 1994 to request that he hand her the Lifetime Achievement Award so she could get a photograph of the presentation. "It's not an award the school confers and we were not familiar with this particular award, but we were happy to congratulate her for receiving it," said Hart.

Even the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences (AMPAS), which owns both the "Oscar" trademark and the copyright on the name "Academy Awards" was offended by Pasten's claim that her Lifetime Achievement Award was an "Oscar."

"In order to protect the Academy's legal rights, we would necessarily have to object to this award being distributed, as well as to any person advertising they're a recipient," AMPAS Legal Rights Coordinator Scott Miller told The Pine Cone.

Two other awards on Pasten's resumé — "Woman of the Year" and "Woman of the Decade" — are available for purchase from ABIRA for $195 each, according to the company.

Not out for publicity now

Dr. Pasten said she purchased the Herald ad to help her launch her literary career. "I was told, 'you have to get your name out there,'" she explained.

And she insisted that her fight to save the raccoons in Pacific Grove and Carmel is not a publicity stunt. "I have a deep, deep love in my heart for these animals," she said this week. "I personally raised and released over 70 raccoons in my wildlife rehabilitation center, and I truly adore them. I am doing this because killing them is wrong, and there are much better ways to solve problems they may cause," Pasten said.

She pledged to devote all her energies to assisting in a humane study of the population, to do free lab tests, free worming and free neutering, and to organize other area veterinarians to donate their services also.

She is also working many hours, she said, on the lawsuit against Pacific Grove which goes to court at 9 a.m. Friday, Feb. 19 in Monterey Superior Court.

Morris, the 9-Lives cat's, Veterinarian is Now a Carmel Resident – AND Recipient of the Lifetime Achievement Award

Dr. Laura Pasten, Owner of the award-winning veterinary practice in Grass Valley, and Veterinarian to Morris, the 9-Lives cat, has recently relocated here in Carmel with her husband, Gordon Hellwig, Jr. Dr. Pasten has been the Spokesperson for the National Cat Health Month Program sponsored by the American Veterinary Medical Association – for this Program, Dr. Pasten traveled across the United States with Morris in hundreds of multi-media presentations (TV, radio and newspaper) to discuss the special nutritional and veterinary needs of cats. Dr. Pasten is also a pilot and often flies her own plane – it's a Skylane 182 and has a lady holding a cat and the words "Morris Airlines" on the tail. Her husband (who owns title companies in several counties) is also a pilot and flies a twin engine Acorstar – they are a 2-plane family! We understand that Dr. Pasten is presently writing medical mysteries – move over Robin Cook!

Dr. Pasten was selected by the American Biographical Institute (editors of the various Who's Who books) as this year's recipient of its Lifetime Achievement Award. The award is a gold plated Oscar, made by the same company that makes the Academy Award Oscars – in fact the impressive-looking trophy is inscribed "Golden Academy Award for Lifetime Achievement." The award was presented to Dr. Pasten by Dr. Frederick Murphy, Dean of the University of California Veterinary School on March 9. Dr. Pasten is being honored for her contributions to Veterinary Medicine and Humanity, especially through the Human-Animal Companion Bond. During the last nine years, Dr. Pasten has toured with Morris, the 9-Lives cat, to stress the importance of annual veterinary visits and vaccines during National Cat Health Month.

Dr. Pasten's veterinary hospital, Mother Lode Veterinary Hospital in Grass Valley, CA, received the Hospital of the Year Award in 1986 and is considered a standard of excellence in animal care. She has also published works in the AVMA Journal, the Veterinary Forum and other periodicals and newsletters.

In addition to her professional duties, Dr. Pasten also has a Certified Wildlife Rehabilitation Center, where she saves and releases thousands of injured and orphaned wild animals back into their respective communities, and this project is totally voluntary, the reward being in the work itself.

These qualities, along with a total commitment to and involvement in her community, render Dr. Pasten both newsworthy and noteworthy, an individual considered by the American Biographical Institute to be worthy of its highest honor.

Dr. Laura Pasten announced her arrival in the Carmel area with this unusual advertisement in the Monterey County Herald on March 20, 1994.

■ POLICE LOG CORRECTION

Theft suspect reportedly returned to crime scene

By TAMARA GRIPPI

A SUSPICIOUS-looking man who was seen in two Carmel Plaza shops just before $140 was stolen Jan. 30, was spotted by merchants less than a week later.

Carmel Police questioned the man — who was on parole for a series of thefts — and searched his car Feb. 5. No stolen property was found and the man denied the theft, so police released him for lack of evidence. Since he has not been charged, police declined to release his name.

The man reportedly was loitering around Toys in the Attic and another plaza store Jan. 30. As soon as the man walked into the store, 72-year-old clerk Patsy Irvine became suspicious. "He did not fit a toy buyer picture at all," she said. "He was unkempt and his clothes were dirty; he prowled around and fingered everything and hung around the more expensive toys."

The man left the store only to return a few minutes later. Irvine believes that he reached under the counter and stole the blue Bank of America cash bag with $140 inside while she was helping a customer and had her back turned.

"Everybody in the world knows about the blue money bag in the drawer under the cash register," Irvine said. "That thing sticks out like a sore thumb. I know he saw me when I took some money out of there."

Irvine, who's been in retail for 55 years, said she's since moved the money bag to a spot known only to the store owner and herself. She also keeps a cordless phone in her pocket at all times now — just in case she needs to call for help.

The original Police Log item about the theft incorrectly stated that the clerk in the shop was a suspect. It was the error of the newspaper and not the Carmel officer who made the report. The Pine Cone regrets the mistake and apologized directly to Irvine.

The actual suspect was described as a 40-year-old, 5'11" Hispanic or Middle Eastern male with shoulder length unkempt hair. The man who returned to the store Feb. 5 "absolutely matched the description," said Carmel Detective Sergeant Pete Poitras.

'I found the whole experience exhilarating. My sister crawled back into the car with a splitting headache.'

Malta: It's a driving experience

By SISSI MALEKI

MALTA — BRONZE Age civilizations . . . the shipwreck of St. Paul . . . the Knights of St. John . . . the British heritage . . . A vacation dream spot for a history buff like myself.

My sister, though, questioned the wisdom of accompanying me even before leaving the Maltese airport. That was when, at the car rental counter, she discovered that driving in Malta was left-handed (a la British) with no choice but a stick shift car. It took some fast talking (sotto voce so the rental agent wouldn't hear) on my part to persuade her that a) I could handle it; and b) I would handle it despite my having left my driver's license back home.

Once having settled in the car, I began reading aloud the set of directions provided to us for heading towards town. But I bit my tongue when I got to "You will encounter a problem area for drivers only when you finally reach a traffic light." Definitely not a good thing to let my sister hear.

Driving, actually, turned out to be fun. Or at least it was for me; my sister continued hyperventilating and braking with her imaginary brake pedal. I tried to ignore her and absorb my surroundings.

Most of the roads in Malta are very rustic and country-like with potholes galore and cars frequently overtaking one another. Hugging the side of the road to avoid such oncoming cars is a risk in itself; you never know when you might come upon a car parked willy-nilly on the side of the busiest roadway. (In all fairness, the rental agent had informed us that "you can park anywhere you want except where there are these two signs" at which point he showed us a tow-away sign and a tire-clamping sign. As it was, the signs turned out to be very rare commodities!)

Dearth of side-view mirrors

Once in town, I understood why so few cars had side-view mirrors — I doubt tourists (the island's mainstay) have enough time to pick up the skills required in squeezing through the narrow streets lined with parked cars. Hence the casualties in side-view mirrors.

In exploring the island of Malta by car there is only one divine truth: you cannot get lost. Keep driving and I guarantee that you will either find a sign for Valletta (the capital) or reach a dead end (a very popular termination for Maltese roads).

I particularly recall the road I took which I thought was headed to the fortress in the distance. I refused to give up and turn back even as the road's ratio of potholes to asphalt flip-flopped. But I had to admit defeat when I came upon boulders interspersed with tall grasses. At this point my sister, in a mild-to-moderate state of panic, got out of the car to help me negotiate a U-turn of sorts. Her panic was upgraded to a moderate-to-serious state when she saw I was pretty much surrounded by deep ditches and holes. Inch by inch, back and forth, punctuated by her screams of "STOP!!!", I got the car to head in the opposite direction.

I found the whole experience exhilarating. My sister crawled back into the car with a splitting headache.

One cannot overstate the friendliness of the Maltese, as evidenced by their common response to a "Pardon me, where is . . ." query. "Just follow me," a driver will invariably reply, postponing an errand for the sake of hospitality. Of course, that's a mixed blessing. Trying to follow an experienced Maltese driver at his speed through the narrow streets and anarchic roundabouts makes you question how badly you really want to see that particular historic site.

The day we left Malta, I sighed with relief as I handed in the car keys to the rental agency. I finally admitted to myself I had taken a huge risk in driving without a license where fender benders are a dime — ooops, I mean a "lira" — a dozen.

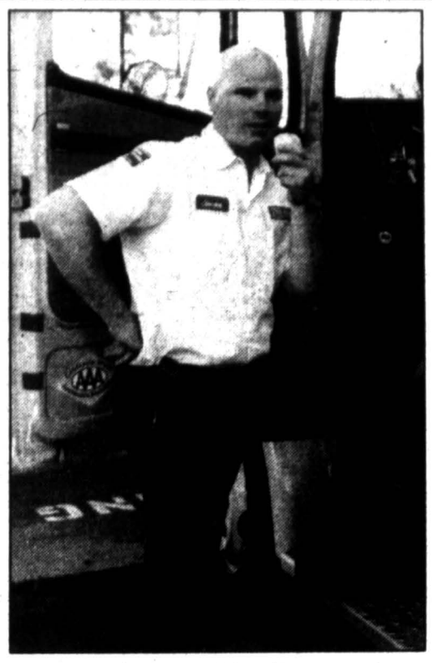
The son, Kenneth Katz, is being held on $500,000 bail and faces five charges, including one count of attempted murder, two counts of assault with caustic chemicals and two counts of assault with force likely to produce great bodily injury, according to the Monterey County District Attorney's office.



Stewart Hopkins

'My son is attacking us'

Hopkins, 34, told The Pine Cone that Katz had placed a "standard call for gasoline" that afternoon. When Hopkins arrived at the Sombrero Road home, Kenneth Katz met him in the driveway.

When Hopkins asked him where the car that had run out of gas was, Katz reportedly told him it was in the garage, but the garage door was stuck. "I said, 'I'll help you get it unstuck,'" Hopkins said, but Katz declined, instead asking the tow truck driver to pour the gasoline into a bucket.

After filling out the paperwork on the call, Hopkins asked Katz for his car's license plate number. Katz took the gasoline inside with him, promising to return in a few minutes with the number.

After five to seven minutes of waiting, Hopkins began to wonder what was taking so long.

"The next thing I know, the door opens and a female in a gray sweatshirt is yelling at me, 'Help me, help me. My son is attacking us. He's trying to kill us. He poured gasoline all over me.'

"She looked really shaken," Hopkins said.

The driver called his dispatcher on his truck radio, reporting the emergency and followed Mrs. Katz into the house. He was shocked by what he saw.

"There was junk all over the place. I just saw the feet (of a man lying near) the living room and then I saw his son, apparently kicking and yelling. He was stomping up and down on his (father's) face, stepping and kicking his face like a football."

The attack had even more bizarre undertones as Kenneth Katz repeatedly yelled, "They're trying to rob me," while kicking his father, Hopkins said.

'All I needed'

Horrified by the scene, Hopkins remembers Mrs. Katz yelling at him, "Help us. Help us. I can't believe you're still standing there."

"That was all I needed," Hopkins said. He immediately went over to Katz and pushed him away from his father. Kenneth Katz stopped his attack for a few moments, looking stunned, Hopkins said. "But after he got his bearings straight, he went full force to his dad. I said, 'That's it.' Then the martial arts just kicked in."

Hopkins managed to get Katz into a "full Nelson," a maneuver used to hold a person under the arms with a special finger hold on the neck.

More 'Real People'

MY COLUMN last week got a small round of applause from a friend who has a 93953 zip code, but who counts herself among the Real People living in the fabled Del Monte Forest.

My friend, you see, earns a weekly wage, and is tired of co-workers saying to her, "Why do you have to work? You live in Pebble Beach."

True. She does. But she and her husband bought their house many years ago. She is not one of those who will be shelling out $140,000 to join Clint Eastwood's exclusive new country club. Nor is she likely to be taking up the offer of the Post Ranch to rent one of its rooms for the special "neighbor" rate of $295 (good only through March 31).

I also doubt that she'll be bringing out-of-town guests to the Pacific's Edge restaurant at the Highlands Inn and asking for a window table since that hotel now asks a $10-per-person surcharge for that courtesy.

Hey, is it me, or is the air around here getting pretty thin? How did dinner for four get to be as much as the mortgage payment I had in Walnut Creek?

Looking back

My sister must have been thinking along the same lines when she sent me the receipt for her stay at the Mark Thomas Inn back in the '70s. (That woman never throws anything away!)

The Mark Thomas, now the Hyatt, charged $20 for a room for two. A restaurant charge, probably for breakfast, possibly for lunch, was $5.46, and my brother-in-law, always the generous tipper, added 75 cents. The room tax was $1.

Think about it; the room tax on the Post Ranch's

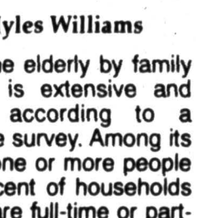
The Golden Years



By Myles Williams

Care of the elderly by family members is extensive and growing, according to a nationwide survey. Among its findings: one or more people in 20 percent of households provide care full-time or part-time. Twenty percent of caregivers are under 35; more than 33 percent ar over 50. Three out of four are women. Fifty percent of the caregivers work full-time; 12 percent part-time. Fifty percent of working caregivers have made changes in their job schedules because of their caregiving responsibilities. Family care of the elderly, according to one authority on the aging, is "like a tidal wave across the country."

On her 100th birthday, Helen Underhill was invited to read from her collection of poetry at a bookstore in Bryn Mawr, Pennsylvania. She began writing poetry as a child in Philadelphia "to deal with my difficulties." Her father went blind when she was eight. Her mother died when she was 13. She continued to write poems while teaching home economics in Philadelphia and New York. It wasn't until age 88 that she published her first collection. What took so long? "I was busy," she explained.

"neighborly" offer would be $29.50!

I admit, I have one foot in "the good old days," but I'm not alone. Another friend, whose income might be considered "comfortable," is still in shock from learning that a round-trip by air from Monterey to Phoenix cost $495 each for her and her husband.

Never mind that they were traveling to the funeral of someone dear to them. Friends have the unhappy habit of dying without consideration for the savings of an advance reservation.

Just looking, thanks

Months ago I decided to go take a look at the upscale retirement community known as Del Mesa, out in Carmel Valley. To my surprise, I was not allowed through the gate since I had not been invited by a resident, and had no valid reason for visiting.

Well, I knew what "gated community" meant, but I didn't think I presented a threat. No matter. A few weeks ago, an "Open House" was advertised at Del Mesa. Still curious, I once again approached the gate.

The uniformed guard waved me over to the side of the road. I waited as he checked someone else through. I finally turned off my engine. A few minutes later he came over and asked to see my driver's license. (Unless I was mistaken, that was a gun on his hip.)

I offered my open wallet, but he said, "Please take it out." You know how licenses stick sometimes; I struggled to remove it, feeling all the while as if I might have forgotten some crime I'd committed in my youth.

He took the license, went back to his guard station. From start to finish, it was a full 10 minutes before I was "cleared." Even then, he told me to "check back" when I left.

After that, the visit to the Open House was anticlimactic. One bedroom, one bath for $200,000. Nice view, though.

OBITUARY

Dancer, choreographer Betty Hackett Martin served a special brand of theater to Carmel

By TAMARA GRIPPI

FOR A decade, Betty Hackett Martin charmed Carmel with the plays, musicals and comedies she produced as owner/-founder of the Studio Theater Restaurant on Dolores Street.

Mrs. Martin died Jan. 26. She was 88.

Members of Carmel's theatrical community fondly remembered her as a energetic woman who inspired many young actors to pursue the stage.

"She was so influential in my life," said Cliff Berry, an actor who was involved with the Studio Theater for many years. "Being able to work with her and to do the things I was able to do. It was like play, not work."

Betty Hackett went to Hollywood to break into show business, much to the chagrin of Betty's mom.

Early start

Born in Stockton in 1910, Mrs. Martin studied dance as a child and made it into the local newspaper several times for appearing in ballets and dance recitals.

At 12, she began teaching ballet classes to other young girls. Teaching became a lifetime pursuit for Mrs. Martin, who could boast of teaching three generations of pupils the fine points of ballroom dance, ballet, jazz, tap and etiquette.

As a teenager, she competed in swimming and diving contests throughout northern California, often meeting famous young athletes and performers. She swam with Johnny Weissmuller of movie "Tarzan" fame, and performed acrobatic stunts with the famed surfer, Duke Kahanamoku, according to her daughter, Shelly Pearson.

At one point, she traveled to Hollywood with her friend Edna Callaghan to try and break into show business. However, her mother cut the adventure short with a telephone call, demanding "Betty Hackett, you come back home," according to Pearson.

Mrs. Martin studied with modern dance pioneers Ruth St. Denis and Ted Shawn at Jacob's Pillow in upstate New York. She also studied with Jack Cole and Bill "Bojangles" Robinson.

She choreographed and danced in numerous ballets with the Stockton Symphony Ballet and performed ballroom dance routines with partner Jack Holmes Pearce.

Mrs. Martin also began working with DeMarcus Brown at the former College of the Pacific, (now known as University of the Pacific) and choreographed all his musicals, Pearson said.

'Who's got the lint?'

In 1953, she married Carmel artist Royden Martin. After a few years in Stockton, the couple settled in Carmel. In 1957, the Martins founded the Studio Theater and presented their first show, a satiric musical review called "8 and Run," written by Jerry De Bono.

When Mrs. Martin first launched the theater, she encouraged college students from Stockton to audition and then she would find places in Carmel for them to live during the summer performances, Pearson said.

In 1960, the Martins and 16 students stayed at the historic stone mansion on Carmel Beach, now owned by Jane and Carl Panattoni.

"It was insane," Pearson recalled, laughing. "How do you manage to have all the kids living together and put on shows at night?"

Locals such as Ruth McElroy, Betty Fowlston and Sam and Edie Karas often performed in Studio Theater productions. In 1968, the Martins expanded their studio theater into a venue for dinner theater. "It was the first dinner theater west of the Mississippi," Pearson said.

Berry remembered the rehearsals for one number — the Dissipation Tango — in which the performers wore black.

"Betty would have a fit every night because somebody came out with a huge piece of lint," Berry said. "We changed the name to 'Who's Got the Lint?'"

Mrs. Martin is survived by her sister, Barbara Hammond of Santa Cruz, and daughters Julie Doerr of Yorba Linda and Shelly Pearson of Santa Cruz, four grandchildren and four great-grandchildren.

ATTACK

Hopkins managed to keep Katz in the hold for "what seemed like 15 minutes."

"I was getting asphyxiated (from the gasoline)," Hopkins said. "My arms were dead. I didn't want to let the guy know. He said, 'I have to reach into my pockets.' I said, 'no way!'"

The weary tow truck driver finally had to release Katz, who seemed to be caught in a momentary daze. But soon after, Katz "started going crazy again," Hopkins said. "He started going for his dad again."

Hopkins used a "sweep maneuver" to kick Katz's feet from under him. He held Katz's left arm behind his back and sat on his back until deputies arrived.

After deputies handcuffed Katz, his father amazingly pulled himself up and walked over to thank Hopkins. "It took all of his energy left to thank me," Hopkins said. "He looked me right in the eye and said 'thank you.'"

Several days after the attack, residents along the tranquil street lined with pine trees are still in shock.

"I wish we would have known," said Marianne Harless. "We would have tried to help." Harless said she didn't even know the Katz' son had been living with the couple.

Other neighbors weren't aware that the attack had taken place.

Repeat offender

Kenneth Katz had been living with his parents in Pebble Beach at the time of the attack, according to Sergeant Jim Meckel of the Monterey County Sheriff's Department. Katz served two prison terms beginning in 1992 and 1995 for driving under the influence, according to Devon Johnson, parole administrator for the county.

In 1992, he was also convicted of transportation/sales of narcotics or controlled substances, Johnson said.

Katz spent at least six months of his prison term at Atascadero State Hospital, a facility that often treats inmates with psychiatric needs, according to Tip Kindel, communications director for the California Department of Corrections.

In October 1996, the parole board revoked his parole five months after it had been granted after he was caught driving with a suspended license and possessing alcohol, Kindel said.

Katz was last released in November 1996 from San Quentin. Katz's arraignment has been continued until Feb. 16, when he will enter a plea and retain counsel.

OPINION

Editorial

Uninvited to a national party

ONE OF THE network news anchors was gushing this week about the low price of gasoline across the United States.

It wasn't the first time that Carmelites had to wonder if they were living in the same country — or on the same planet — as the people interviewed for a TV report.

"When I saw the price, 92 cents a gallon, I thought it was a mistake," said a woman in Georgia.

"In Virginia, the price hit 72 cents for unleaded regular," the correspondent intoned.

"We are experiencing the lowest prices — in inflation-adjusted dollars — ever," an oil industry analyst said. Truckers, airlines, and traveling sales people are all profiting mightily from reduced fuel bills, he added.

Things aren't so rosy west of the Rockies, the reporter said. Out here, we were told, the average price is $1.02 per gallon of unleaded regular.

Huh?

Even as the TV broadcast the happy news of low gas prices to the rest of the country, motorists all over the Central Coast were filling up on unleaded at $1.29 or more per gallon.

One local gas station owner explained the discrepancy this way: "Everything costs more here."

The gasoline companies, being aware of price trends in expensive parts of the country like Carmel, charge more for the gasoline delivered to our dealers, he said.

And the local dealers, faced with higher land costs, higher rents, and higher wages for their workers, tack on more per gallon than a dealer in San Fernando or Des Moines does.

"The gas company that owns our station tried to double our rent to $9,000 per month this year," a local dealer said. "We managed to hold them to a 25% increase, but it still makes it very difficult for us to make any money," he said.

Carmelites can at least take comfort in one thing: they don't have to spend any money on gasoline to drive to the most beautiful place in the U.S.A.

Raccoon delivery offered

Dear Editor:

In light of the fact that Jack's Peak veterinarian Laura Pasten and Citizens Against Raccoon Extermination (CARE) have chosen to impede the community's efforts to study the severity of roundworm infestation in the local raccoon population (Pine Cone, February 5), I have decided that the next time I relocate a raccoon caught in one of the traps around my Carmel home, I will take the little beastie for a ride to Jack's Peak. To ensure that he receives the best care available, I will happily release him in close proximity to Dr. Pasten's home or office if she would care to share her address with us.

When a dissenting minority throws bureacratic impediments in the way of activites deemed by the majority to be in the best interest of the community, individual action is the only redress available. I heartily encourage others to join me in a grassroots effort to provide CARE members with all the raccoons they can eat — er, accomodate.

Important facts

Dear Editor:

Kirstie Wilde did a good job of reporting the unsung heroes afternoon. Being born into a newspaper family, I can appreciate how hard it is to cover stories without leaving out important facts and not to offend anyone. But for the record I would like to add that old age isn't my problem. Arthritis is. And I would like to add some more names of wonderful Carmelites: Sandy, Vali, Diane, Kathy, Steve and Josie.

CHS soccer girls earn another CCS trip

By JERRY STEWART

The efforts of Lady Padres Emily Moss (No.5), Kersten Wehde (center) and Lia Chaney (background) have helped take Carmel back to the CCS playoffs.

AFTER SITTING snugly at the top of the standings for almost the entire season, members of the Carmel High girls soccer team found themselves fighting for their lives in their regular season finale.

Facing their biggest test of the season, the Lady Padres met a solid York team that was lurking only one point behind Carmel in the Mission Trail Athletic League standings and trying to knock the Lady Padres down to third place.

The winner would solidify a claim to second place in the MTAL, but more importantly the victor would also sew up a Central Coast Section playoff berth.

As they have all season, the Lady Padres came through when they needed to, winning the game 1-0 when senior Kersten Wehde booted in the game-winning goal off a corner kick from teammate Emily Moss with only four minutes left in regulation.

"It was so exciting," said Wehde. "It's been such a roller coaster season. Emily kicked the ball and it landed at my feet and from there it went into the goal."

Wehde's feet also provided a miraculous win against Gonzales on Feb. 4.

Against the Spartans, Wehde scored the game-winning goal with fewer than 30 seconds remaining.

With the win over York, the Lady Padres can now sit and wait to find out where they will be seeded for the forthcoming CCS playoffs.

Because of their impressive record, which includes only one loss to King City, the Lady Padres could possibly receive a first round bye.

The seedings will be announced Saturday and games will begin next week.

"Considering what we have went through, I'm amazed we did so well," said head coach Pat Lenz, referring to the loss of players such as Marisol Valdez due to injuries and other personal matters. "I've used 25 to 26 players on varsity this season."

For the Lady Padres, it was the third year in a row that the girls had to win — and won — their final match of the year to secure a playoff berth.

With Carmel High on break next week, some players will be out of town when the playoffs get underway and Lenz said he will have to juggle his roster.

Entering the playoffs last year as MTAL champs, the Lady Padres were knocked off in the first round.

Sports Wrapup

MORE SOCCER: The Robert Louis Stevenson girls soccer team concluded its season on Feb. 9 with an 8-1 win over Anzar, finishing with a 6-6-4 record in league play. Sequoia Chappellet-Volpini and Elizabeth Harrold had two goals apiece for the Lady Pirates.

HOOPS: With only four games remaining on the schedule as of Feb. 10, both the CHS and RLS girls basketball teams were poised to make an appearance in the Central Coast Section playoffs. A team must have at least a .500 overall or league-winning percentage to qualify. Stevenson (6-11 overall, 5-4 MTAL), which has been led all season long by MTAL scoring leader Katie Denny (20 points a game average), needs to win two of its final four games to clinch a spot. Meanwhile, the CHS girls (10-7 overall, 6-3 MTAL) need to only win one more game to qualify. The Lady Padres have been paced by Michelle Gaudoin, who's averaging 14 points a game, Roslyn Riddell (13) and Michelle Ocampo (10).

Everyday Heroes.

Cal-Am salutes Eric Foy, Jesse Reynoso, Sal Russo & Sal DeMaria and all of our dedicated employees who bring water to your family everyday, rain or shine.

Some people work 9-5, some people don't quit until the job is done. No matter what.

At Cal-Am, our commitment to Monterey Peninsula families means we do whatever it takes -- in whatever kind of weather -- to make sure your family receives the water you need to bathe, cook and clean with, no matter what.

Recent years have brought record rains and floods to our area, and we have worked hard to ensure a stable water supply during inclement weather conditions.

This year, however, we haven't had record rains. As a result, we are going to have to work even harder and renew our commitment to water conservation. This year, you will see our everyday heroes reaching out into the community to implement conservation measures mandated by an order from the State Water Resources Control Board. When you see them, you will know that come rain or shine, they will be here to deliver on our promise to your family: an uninterrupted supply of water, meeting or exceeding all health and safety standards. You can be an everyday hero, too, by fixing leaky faucets, installing low-flow toilets and shower heads, installing timers and irrigation systems, and by running full washing machines and dishwashers. Together, everyday things do make a difference.

Water conservation is just one way Cal-Am works with you and your family to protect our natural resources.

THE SHORT LIFE OF EARLY CARMEL BOHEMIAN POET SUBJECT OF FREE TALK

Nora May French, circa 1899

THE SUICIDE of 26-year-old poet Nora May French was one of several Bohemian tragedies recorded in Carmel-by-the-Sea in the early 1900s. The reason for her death has never been determined, but her life, leading up to her final day, will be the subject of a free morning and afternoon lecture on Monday, Feb. 22 at Carmel's Harrison Memorial Library Park Branch on Sixth and Mission.

"Nora May French: Her Life and Poetry" is the subject of Cynthia Medeiros' lecture on the multi-talented poet, second of the 1999 Henry Meade Williams Local History Lecture Series. Medeiros, a master's degree candidate in English literature at Cal State Chico, will speak at 10:30 a.m. and 2:30 p.m.

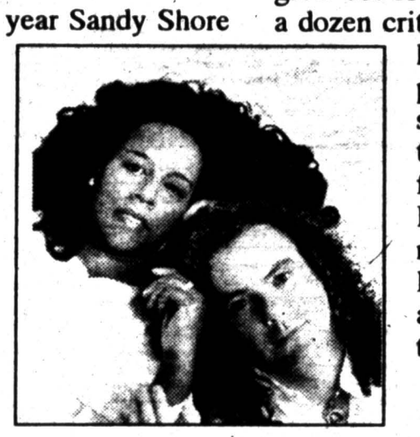
Retro Seventies party rocks Embassy Suites

Plugged In

By Stephen L. Vagnini

Promoter Sandy Shore has established herself as the major music promoter on the Monterey Peninsula. Following her successful New Year's Eve extravaganza at the Embassy Suites in Seaside, Shore kicks off the new year with two distinctive productions, both this weekend. Saturday night, Feb. 13, nostalgia buffs have the opportunity to relive the disco craze at a '70s throwback party at the Embassy Suites. A cover of $20 in advance ($25 at the door) admits you to a Studio 54 setting complete with two dance floors, a catwalk, concert-size sound, lighting, fog-hazer . . . you get the picture.

For the third straight year Sandy Shore Productions presents Windham Hill recording artists Tuck and Patti in a special Valentine's Day performance to be held this year at the Clubhouse at the Quail Lodge & Resort. Smooth jazz stalwarts, Tuck Andress and Patti Cathcart have been married for 20 years and have been recording for more than 10. Their latest CD, "Paradise Found," stays true to their long-standing tradition: simple arrangements that showcase Tuck's passionate guitar virtuosity and Patti's rich soprano vocals. Two performances will be offered this Sunday: a noon brunch show ($75) and a 7 p.m. reception ($55). For reservations and further information contact SSP at 649-1223.



Patti and Tuck

Promoter Barbara Murphy has earned a reputation for promoting an eclectic array of world-class folk, ethnic and traditional music. Beginning with tonight's (Feb. 12) Tom Russell appearance at Carlton Hall, Murphy looks forward to another busy year and an intriguing lineup for February. One of the best contemporary singer/songwriter's today, Russell is a product of the progressive country music scene that grew out of Austin, Texas in the '70s. With a dozen critically acclaimed albums under his cowboy belt, Russell composes song that reveal an introspective portrayal of the characters that exist on society's fringe. Russell returns to Monterey with talented sideman guitarist Andrew Hardin. Music stars at 8 p.m. Tickets are $15 in advance and $20 at the door.

THE BOOKSHELF

Yet more news of the weird about U.S. presidents

GEORGE WASHINGTON was not our first president! Or so Carmel Valley's Gregg Stebben and co-author Jim Morris of Dallas, Texas would have us believe.

In their book, "White House: Confidential — The Little Book of Weird Presidential History," chapter headings read: Weird Family Values; Sex!; Scandal!; Fights!; Money!; Prophesy! Death!; Goofballs!; Veeps!; and Take This Job and Shove It!

This should give you some idea of the irreverent albeit amusing thrust of their 275-page book — published by Cumberland House Publishing, Nashville — which is selling nationally and in most local bookstores for $10.95.

Gregg Stebben

As for that impostor, George Washington, Stebben says that John Hanson was our first president after the Articles of Confederation were signed. It was only after the Constitution was signed that George Washington became our president.

"Do the math!" Stebben tells us. "The 13 original colonies proclaimed their independence in 1776. George Washington became president in 1789."

But wait! Stebben doesn't stop there. He says that after Congress unanimously elected Hanson president and Hanson served his term, he was followed by seven other presidents before George ascended to the exalted position. He lists Washington's other predecessors on page 261 in Appendix C: Elias Boudinot, Thomas Mifflin, Richard Henry Lee, Nathan Gorman, Arthur St. Clair and Cyrus Griffin.

You probably didn't know that: Abraham Lincoln left Mary Todd standing at the altar on their wedding day and that it was two years later before they finally tied the knot (page 32); Richard Nixon was "meaner than a junkyard dog" (see pages 91 and 92 for details); Andrew Johnson was a tailor by trade before he became president, and continued to make all his own suits while in the White House (pg. 189); Calvin Coolidge rode a mechanical bucking horse in his White House bedroom daily (pg. 212); James Buchanan was, perhaps, American's first gay president (not that there's anything wrong with that) and William Rufus De Vane King was, maybe, America's first gay vice president. He says the two for years were known, together, as "Miss Nancy and Aunt Fancy" (pages 70 and 71).

These are only a few of the irreverent and perhaps irrelevant revelations made in "White House: Confidential."

Stebben appeared on both CNN and Entertainment Tonight to talk about his book, which, by the way, is his fourth. He also has a four-book Pocket Professor Series (Pocket Books) coming out this year and in 2000.

By Margot Petit Nichols

You can meet author Stebben, hear him read from the book and discuss George Washington's "fraudulent first presidency" at a 6 p.m. autograph party on Monday, Feb. 22 (Washington's actual birthday) at the Oak Deli in Carmel Valley Village, 24 West Carmel Valley Road.

WE RECOUNTED the premise of Aaron Elkins' latest (his 16th) novel, "Loot" several months ago in The Bookshelf. If you recall, the plot finds Boston art consultant Ben Revere on the trail of a painting stolen from his Boston pawnbroker friend who is murdered during the theft.

The painting, a Velasquez portrait plundered by the Nazis during World War II, had been lost in transit to the Altaussee salt mine in the Austrian Alps, and mysteriously turns up some 50 years later in the Boston hock shop.

Revere's attempts to recover the painting in Europe for the son of the original owner, an elderly Austrian count, brings him in perilous contact with Russian mafia chieftains, Hungarian gang lords and former Nazis. A surprise twist in the final chapters makes a thrilling read even more so.

Aaron Elkins

Elkins, who now lives in Carmel, had just returned from a "book-signing and media stuff" trip to Seattle when we again interviewed him early this week.

A physical anthropologist with a doctorate from U.C. Berkeley and two master's degrees, Elkins told us he spent much of his life as a professor of anthropology. His first novel, urged on by his wife Charlotte, was published in 1982, and he has been turning out "a little less than one a year" ever since.

His previous mystery novels have featured, not so curiously, a forensic anthropologist — one Gideon Oliver — and an art curator-sleuth, Chris Norgren.

Charlotte and Aaron have written three books together that feature a struggling female golfer, Lee Ofsted. If you're wondering, as we were, how two people can write one book, here's how: "Charlotte is the idea person and does the first draft, then I come in," he revealed.

Elkins said he had no trouble at all having his first book

SEARCHING FOR just the right place to propose on Valentine's Day — or just want a truly elegant setting for a romantic dinner? Or how about a third option: Would you like to have a superb dinner served graciously by knowledgeable waitpersons in a handsome venue?

The Old Bath House in Pacific Grove fits the bill for all of the above.

Off Lovers Point Park in Pacific Grove, the Old Bath House overlooks the Pacific Ocean, and on moonlight nights, diners can see divers in the waters off the nearby sandy beach.

Owner David Bindel opened the restaurant, appropriately enough, on Valentine's Day 24 years ago. This is a romantic restaurant, not only because of its setting, but for its elegance and ambiance. Every detail has been worked out to please patrons, right down to the discreet lighting with recessed downlights above each table, allowing diners to read the menu comfortably and to see what they are eating.

Director of operations Dorothy Maras-Ildiz says that two or three marriage proposals take place at the Old Bath House weekly. Weddings have have been held there, and couples return year after year to celebrate their anniversaries. Table one is the most private of the view tables, but tables 3, 5 and 7 are tables for two, also, with equally excellent views.

à la carte

By MORGAN

Kurt Hansen, maitre d' and wine captain, greeted us in the foyer and seated us at one of these window tables attractively decked out with pale pink linen tablecloth and napkins, candlelight and a rose in a silver bud vase. Our waitperson, George Barker — a 15-year veteran of the Old Bath House — allowed us plenty of time to look over the extensive, sophisticated menu and wine list before we placed our order.

We started with a signature silky lobster bisque ($9.75) garnished with sevruga caviar and crème fraîche. We have had this excellent appetizer on previous visits to the Old Bath House, but never before had it been so truly superb, so redolent of lobster flavor. It was enhanced with cream and sherry and medallions of lobster. To achieve this subtly intense flavor, lobster shells are simmered in a court bouillon; a triple stock reduction allows the lobster flavor to come through brilliantly. Each spoonful was sensually rich and satisfying in its fragrant, flavorful creaminess.

So rich, in fact, that on our next visit to the Old Bath House, we will forgo an entrée and follow the bisque with one of the four salads offered — possibly the Maytag blue cheese and fresh pear salad that comes with candied pecans and dressed in a balsamic vinaigrette ($8.50).

This is not to say that the 13 or so entrées should be bypassed. One is more tempting than the next. Chicken, fish, pork, prawns, venison, duck, steak, lamb and abalone are among these main courses that range from $19.50 to $30.50, with the abalone, which is subject to availability, in the $40-plus range.

The rack of lamb ($29.50) is another signature dish, as is the Beef Bindel appears at the Media Room with opening act Steve Kritzer. Bourne, a winner of the prestigious Canadian Juno Award, has released six albums of original material. His songs are deeply spiritual, thought-provoking and inspiring. Kritzer, a San Jose native, is as comfortable with Celtic and bluegrass music as he is with traditional folk. Music starts at 8 p.m. Tickets are $15/$20.

Other concerts presented by Murphy this month include Lian de Cubel, a sextet from Asturias, a Celtic region in northwest Spain; and acoustic bluesman Eric Bibb. Appearing at Carlton Hall Saturday, Feb. 20, Lian de Cubel play Celtic music with a Spanish twist. The music stems from the Asturian tradition of fiddle, flute and above all, Asturian bagpipes. Start time is 8 p.m., $15 advance and $20 at the door. On Wednes-day, Feb. 24 one of the leading lights of the acoustic blues scene, Eric Bibb performs at the Media Room. A native New Yorker, Bibb is the son of folk and blues singer Leon Bibb. Based in Sweden since the 1980s, his music is just now reaching a wider audience in North America. If you like the music of Keb Mo and Alvin Youngblood Hart, this show is a must-see, with a 7:30 p.m. start. $20 at the door. Call 373-7379 for information about all Barbara Murphy performances.

MISSION PROFILE: "Take photos of AT&T moments that are different, out-of-the-ordinary . . ."

Time Limit: Three hours, Thursday morning, first day of golf tournament.

Piece of cake. I knew "out-of-the-ordinary." I spoke the language.

Except, of course, when it came to golf. The sport in which I had no idea what "ordinary" was in the first place — a vital prerequisite for recognizing the "out-of" ordinary.

So I took a deep breath, enlisted the aid of God, and set off on my mission.

And there, in the midst of the swarm of press photographers glued to the two Dream Teams (Tiger Woods and Kevin Costner, Mark O'Meara and Ken Griffey), I found "different":

As in their gender (all males) to mine (female);

As in the length of their zoom lenses (2 feet minimum) to mine (4 inches);

As in the diameter of their zoom lenses (6 inches minimum) to mine (2.5);

(Author's note: I wonder if zoom sizes are a male thing)

As in their outerwear (nylon-type pants) and mine (corduroys that didn't appreciate being soaked and muddied on the soggy links);

As in the smooth hum of their shutters clicking and the ear-jarring chirp-a-ka-ching of my shutter.

As in their knowledge of how to navigate through the crowds and the lack of mine, which repeatedly found me jumping up and down trying to figure out how to get beyond the brick wall of spectators and inside the ropes where I was supposed to be;

As in their better self-preservation instincts than mine, which had me standing (alone) only a few feet away from where Jack Lemmon's ball landed.

Yup. Now I can honestly say, I know "different"— even in golf.

■ Heart Association salutes CHOMP chief

"An Evening of Romance & Wine on the High Seas"

I challenge anyone to come up with a more seductive title than the one the American Heart Association used for their fundraiser on Feb. 6th at the Marriott.

Adding to the glamour of the evening was a veritable Who's Who of our Peninsula, out in force to pay tribute to Jay Hudson, recently retired president of our Community Hospital. Politicos Sylvia and Leon Panetta, Karin Strasser Kauffman, Sandy Koffman and Edie and Sam Karas joined the likes of Sally and Peter Smith of CSUMB, Sherrie and Tom McCullough, Ramona and Gordon Paul Smith, Anna and Joe Panetta (yes, Leon's brother), Demi Briscoe, Jim Tunney and his wife Linda, Lotte and Bert Mendelsohn and many more, to celebrate Jay Hudson's long career.

A live auction highlighted the arm-twisting skills of auctioneer Bob Rosenthal who moonlights — during the day, that is — as an attorney.

Nonetheless, there were incredible bargains, most notably the $14,000 Seabourn cruise that went for $6,500. For his part, Leon Panetta had offered an hour of his time as an auction item; regrettably, Sylvia was barred from bidding on that one! As it was, the two highest bidders each paid to get their own hour with the former White House Chief of Staff thanks to Leon's inability to say "no" for a good cause. A truly beautiful and enjoyable evening . . .

Just a not so little ol' house party

By FLO SNYDER

EVER BEEN to an all-day AT&T Pro-Am golf party in an $8 million home that sits atop a gentle dune overlooking the Pacific Ocean on the west and has wrap-around golf courses to the east, north and south?

About 200 lucky people did on Feb. 3, thanks to the superb hospitality of Pebble Beach residents Ingemar and Linda Lundquist. True believers in the philosophy of taking the good stuff that life throws at you and spreading it around, this couple (and more about him later) makes certain that the bounty lands not only on family and friends but on deserving volunteers who contribute time and effort to the community.

Now I'm not sure which category the Carmel snoop Fleece Dennis and I qualified for, since we weren't exactly on anybody's "A" list of invitees to this annual soiree. So we just did what we always do and muscled our way in, flashing an expired Pine Cone credential and acting, well, like pushy media types. It works every time.

Upon entering the spectacular structure with its 360 degree views, all formality evaporated, and the good times were a-rollin' as happy guests availed themselves of the bountiful buffet of food and drink. Best of all though were the ringside seats in the tented patio that offered unobstructed views of Spyglass Hills' fifth hole. Wow! It couldn't get much better than this — but it did.

Being so close to Pro Am golfers on the green was like having an invitation to act out the oft-quoted AT&T commercial to "Reach out and touch someone." I was more than tempted to do that, especially when (be still my heart) Tiger Woods and Kevin Costner came by. But the idea died when a large, red-coated marshal standing guard seemed to be reading my mind. His lips never moved and not a sound was uttered, but the "DON'T" was deafening. So I didn't.

Meanwhile, back at the bar, guests were topping one another recounting some of the hilarious events connected with this party in the past. Family friend Greg Walsh recalled the time his seven-pound Maltese pup somehow made its way through the spectator gallery unnoticed, ran out on the green and picked up a golfer's ball — that was still in play! The mutt hasn't been invited back since.

Also making the rounds was the Clint Eastwood debacle called "The Good, The Bad, The Ugly, The Bogey." No, it wasn't a movie but a performance — or lack thereof — describing Clint's abysmal play in the Pro-Am. His "ugly" shot was the one that went from the men's tee to the ladies' tee! (It really happened.) The "good" was the one that went from the ladies' tee to within four feet of the cup. But following that near-recovery, he missed a par putt for the "bad" shot, earning him a well-deserved "bogey."

Flo Snyder and John Saar hammer out 'The Party Clause' while hosts Ingemar and Linda Lundquist (seated) enjoy the festivities a stone's throw from champion golf.

Hamburger-to-go

Proximity of the green to the house is a magnet for comedian golfers who can't resist the temptation to perform for this party friendly audience. Bill Murray, one of the regulars, expects — and gets — a special hamburger with everything during his foursome's play at the hole. Now a tradition, the burger is always served pronto and with much fanfare for fear of what the irrepressible comic might do if not immediately pacified. He got his meal on time this year and caused no visible damage.

Needing no encouragement, Tommy Smothers of the Smothers Brothers blithely demonstrated his finesse with the yo-yo, receiving laughs and applause — and whatever else he wanted — from the party.

Lundquist guests come in all shapes, sizes and ages from tots to boomers to seniors. Kids watching videos were sprawled on the floor of the entertainment room or played hide-and-seek in the upstairs loft. The preponderance of youngsters this year was explained by Kelly and Stu Edwards. (He's a business associate and Pebble Beach neighbor of the hosts.) According to them, it's due to inflation. Huh? It seems available high school babysitters raise rates during the AT&T and are now charging $12 an hour. Oh, the joys of a free economy.

There was plenty of joy but little economy when Foye Walkup, the rightfully proud contractor, installed what could be the Peninsula's most luxurious guest bath in the north wing of the Lundquist home. Sure, it looked great but still it's just a bathroom. What makes it so expensive? I asked. Pointing to a gleaming nickel-plated toilet paper holder, Walkup explained: "For starters, these babies at $450 apiece —" I see . . .

As the party continued in the late afternoon, a great sea of red seemed to permeate the place. It was that big marshal and the rest of his red-coated team who'd finished their rounds and were now chowing down at the buffet. This, too, was a tradition started years ago by the hosts. In the past, I was told, food was delivered on silver trays to the hard-working marshals right on the fairway. It was a sort of links version of curb service.

Well, folks, I'm sorry to report there is a sad part to this story. Alas! The house is for sale. Could it be that this wonderful tradition of Party-on-the-Green might be lost forever?

Not if broker-realtor John Saar, who knows a thing or two about tossing a good party himself, has his way. He's thinking of adding a "Party Clause" to the sales listing. This would insure that the future owner must continue the Lundquist tradition. If not, 200 of the party faithful might show up next year anyway. Make that 201. I've got the date circled.

Oh, remember earlier when I said "more about the Lundquists later?" Well, at the risk of never being invited back for squealing, you're entitled to know what this quiet, unassuming, thoughtful and very gentle man has done for mankind — and womankind, too. You see, he's the inventor, mechanical engineer and developer of the first balloon catheter used in the angioplasty procedure that has since saved the lives of untold numbers of heart patients throughout the world. Although you'll never hear a word of this from him, he is the guy. And so, Ingemar, I know you're displeased that even this little bit of information has been revealed. But try to think of it as an expression of universal gratitude from families and friends of all those who've been given a second chance, thanks to you.

Now, back to that Party Clause . . .

Unobstructed views of Spyglass Hills' fifth hole make for a superb backdrop for the Lundquist's annual do.

annual party thrown for the volunteers of the AT&T Pro-Am Tournament, this year held Feb. 3rd at Monterey's Doubletree Hotel. For those who may not realize it, this huge party was originally the clambake organized by Bing Crosby.

Furthermore, as the volunteers all used to be men, the gathering had quite a colorful reputation. (You know, as in "boys will be boys.")

Fast forward a bit, and thanks to the efforts of Janice Russo, (wife of just-retired Golf Foundation Executive Director Lou Russo), women became more visible. In fact, it was through her efforts that the Carmel area chapter of Soroptimist International began serving as "volunteers for the volunteers," making certain that for at least one night, every wish a golf tournament volunteer might have was satisfied.

The evening is then capped off with a spectacular show put on by various celebrities who donate their services.

But each year, these volunteers have only one desire as they stream through the front doors: "WHERE'S THE SHRIMP??" Lord help the Soroptimist who has no idea of the shrimp's location; she might as well resign in disgrace.

Fortunately, no such lapse occurred this time. Guests were amply spoiled with not only shrimp, but lobster and crab as well. Two guests were feeling so content, they were determined to include their names on Soroptimists Pat Sinclair and Joyce Newell's non-existent dance cards. Well, any good service organization member knows that "the customer is always right." Thus, away they danced . . .

named after the Old Bath House proprietor.

The lamb has a loose crumb coating of pistachios and persillade (chopped parsley and garlic) and comes with a thyme jus, which is made by roasting lamb bones for flavor and color, and deglazing the roasting pan with red wine and tomato paste. Vegetables and bundles of thyme are simmered in the pan for many hours. The resulting jus is strained and blended with thyme and butter and served with the lamb, garnished with a sprig of fresh thyme.

The lamb is another very rich dish. It is served with garlic mashed potatoes, green beans and baby carrots that are still crunchy after their preparation, and an oven-roasted tomato stuffed with cream cheese and pesto — this latter a standard accompaniment to meat dishes here.

The Beef Bindel, a filet mignon, is baked in a puff pastry with prosciutto, forest mushrooms and truffle mousse pâté — a sort of enhanced single portion Wellington — with a cabernet reduction. Gratin potatoes and fresh vegetables, as will as the ubiquitous stuffed tomato, are served with the filet.

The magician in back of all this sophisticated fare is Sheri O'Connor, a graduate of the New England Culinary Institute of Montpelier, Vermont, the hands-on, five-days-a-week executive chef. Chef O'Connor did her groundwork at the Highlands Inn, Fresh Cream, L'Escargot and Tarpy's. Her talented sous chef, Eric Kroucik, takes over for chef on her days off, and does a brilliant job.

Had we selected the salad following the lobster bisque, there might have been room for one of pastry chef Tomas Vasquez's tempting seven desserts which include a honey creme brûlé infused with lavender essence and served with fresh berries and cookies ($5.75) — and hot pecan ice cream fritters, in which vanilla ice cream is rolled in toasted pecans, quickly fried and served over caramel and chocolate sauce ($7.50).

If you want to truly cosset yourself, you could order either the Grand Marnier soufflé served with Grand Marnier creme anglaise or the chocolate soufflé which comes with a bittersweet chocolate Chambord sauce and fresh raspberries. These are both $7.50 and must be ordered when you indicate your entrée selection, as they take at least 20 minutes to prepare.

We must not forget to mention that the Old Bath House Restaurant has a knowledgeable and meticulously-trained staff, and wine captain Gary Vandendries' informed selections of imported and California wines are from some of the very best vintners. The extensive wine list reads like a compendium of who's who in the wine world.

Is it any wonder that the Old Bath House has won many awards, including the California Restaurant Writers Association award and, for the past 15 years, the Mobil three stars award. Do keep it in mind for this Valentine's weekend — and any other day of the year.

Golden Fingers," Ariale shared the bill with jazz greats Hank Jones, Cedar Walton, Kenny Barron. Says Downbeat Magazine, "Ariale's playing is haunting, gorgeous . . . a breeze of warm sophistication and accomplished pianism . . . expressive passion . . . intelligent interpretation." Music begins both nights at 7:30. Tickets are $25 at the door. Call 655-2010 for reservations.

Zeitlin/Friesen

The great thing about the Jazz Store in Carmel is of course the music and the intimate surroundings, but a bonus is always the luminaries that are likely to attend. At last week's performance by Mose Allison, semi-regular Clint Eastwood was joined by his wife, Dina, and star-in-the-making, pianist Diana Krall. Krall, who performed later in the week at the Clambake at the Doubletree Hotel, is also scheduled to perform at the Quail Lodge later this year.

As always, the Jazz Store has something in store for jazz buffs and this Saturday, Feb. 13 the talented duo of pianist Denny Zeitlin and bassist David Friesen are slated to perform. Zeitlin, a psychiatrist as well as a pioneer of the synthesis of jazz, electronics, classic and rock, is a top-flight pianist who meshes perfectly with master bassist Friesen. Long-time collaborators, Zeitlin and Friesen have recorded numerous albums together and in concert the duo feed off of each other's creative powers. Friesen, one of the few bassists in the world who is able to play a solo concert and keep the audience riveted, has played with a wide variety of jazz musicians including Larry Coryell, Randy Brecker and John Handy. Music starts at 7:30 p.m. Tickets to this concert are $30.

Also this Saturday, Feb. 13, San Francisco Bay Area vocalist Taylor P. Collins makes her debut performance at Sly McFly's. Collins, a member of the West Coast Blues Hall of Fame, will celebrate her birthday on Saturday. Her debut CD "Wrap Me Up" will be available for sale and a portion of the sales will be donated to the Monterey Bay Blues Festival Music Scholarship. Advance tickets are available at Sly McFly's for $5. Admission's $7 at the door.

Speaking of Real Estate

By Paul & Nellie Brocchini

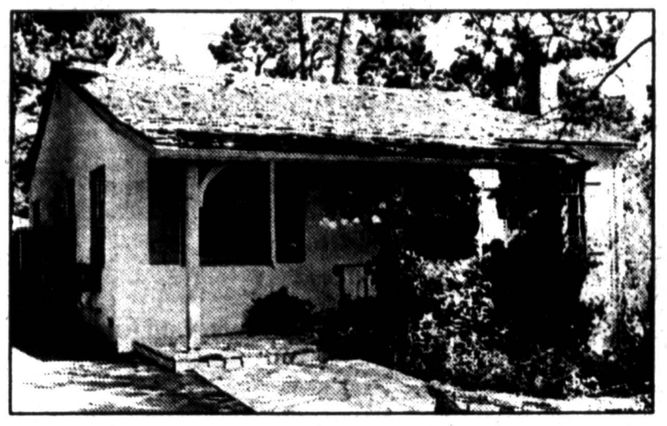
The 'Value of Place' and the Carmel premium

TAKE AN average home in Barstow and move it to Carmel-by-the-Sea. Obviously, the home's new location makes it suddenly worth much more. But how much value would the charm and mystique of Carmel-by-the-Sea add to this — or to any — home? In other words, what is the Carmel premium?

Donovan Rypkema, analyst for the Real Estate Services Group in Washington, D.C., grappled with this issue in an enlightening report submitted to the City of Carmel in May, 1998. The title of that report is "Real Estate in Carmel: The Value of Place."

His report is surprisingly good reading and his methodology impressive. Readers who would like a fuller understanding of what follows may wish to read it.

Mr. Rypkema is a real estate economist who has been practicing since 1975. He has won recognition as a leader in the economics of preserving areas of special character. (His analysis, by the way, is limited to Carmel-by-the-Sea. It does not include Carmel Point, Carmel Woods, Hatton Fields and the other close-by neighborhoods, all of which benefit to a greater or lesser degree from the Carmel premium.)



How much of a home's value is due to its "place"?

Land use and design issues are always on the front burner in Carmel. All of us Carmelites have our own opinions, often colored by our individual financial and personal interests. If we have a view we want to keep it. If we have a property with sub-par amenities we want to be able to improve it. If there is a threatening tree near our house we want to cut it down. If we are content with what we have, our house meets our needs and the neighbor's pine is not about to split us in two we often don't want anyone else to be able to change anything!

Our piece of paradise

Where there is unanimity is that we are all interested in the value of our piece of paradise. It is instructive, therefore, to look at what the elements of value are. Rypkema did a statistical analysis of real estate values by measuring the relative importance of "place," neighborhood, lot and house.

The obvious finding is that the value of place is extraordinarily high in Carmel. Take any house in Carmel, from the most exalted to the humblest, move it to Modesto, and what would it be worth? Everybody knows it would be much less — but Rypkema attempts to quantify the loss of value. What he finds is that the "external factors" of value (place and neighborhood) constitute from 40% to 72% of the total value of your property and ours.

Think about that: 42% to 72% of total value is wrapped up in issues and impressions over which individuals have little control. The mystique which makes up the idea of Carmel is something that is beyond our influence as individuals. Its preservation and enhancement is a community challenge.

Collectively the people of Carmel create the elements of community value, which include our attractive neighborhoods and downtown, our cultural opportunities and the unique quality of life found here. We all contribute, but policy and direction from the city is key to the preservation or erosion of the Carmel mystique.

Carmel premium by neighborhood

Rypkema divided Carmel-by-the-Sea roughly along the same lines that our local Multiple Listing Service does: Northwest, Northeast, Central (which the MLS calls Southwest and which I refer to as the Golden Rectangle) and Southeast.

He added a category — properties on Scenic — which is a good idea because Scenic Road has its own price level.

Rypkema then divided value into four components: the house, the lot, the neighborhood premium and the Carmel premium.

His research showed that, for existing houses, the Carmel premium is 42% of value in the Northeast — the least expensive part of town.

At the opposite end of the spectrum is Scenic, where the Carmel premium, Rypkema says, is a relatively modest 21% of value and the neighborhood adds a whopping 51% of total value.

For existing homes, the Carmel premium was 35% in the Southeast, 30% in the Central, and 34% in the Northwest.

New houses

New houses are so valued by buyers that the Carmel premium is reduced. Let's compare the Northeast with Scenic again.

In the Northeast the Carmel premium for a new home drops to 24%. Even on Scenic, new houses command a larger share of the overall value pie with the Carmel premium falling to 13% of value in that pricey neighborhood. Similarly, in the other neighborhoods, new homes are sought after and the effect of the Carmel premium is diminished.

Not a market for everyone

Carmel, snug in its one square mile, is not big enough, argues Rypkema, to serve the housing needs of many groups of buyers. There is not room for lots of apartments and condominiums. There is not much, if any, low-cost housing. There are many houses that would be considered wrecks elsewhere, but they certainly are not low-cost.

We had a listing a few years ago of a cute little charmer on a sub-par, 1,800-square-foot lot. The house had one bath, a tiny kitchen and no bedrooms. The only suitable place to sleep, other than the living room, was a porch. The location was terrific, close to town and the beach. A woman came to an open house and looked around in amazement. She glared at us and sternly exclaimed, "It should be against the law to sell a house like this!"

What could we say? We were tempted to give her a good old New York "Get outta here!", but professionally squashed that urge, shrugged and smiled. The house, by the way, sold for an excellent price to savvy buyers who knew they weren't acquiring much in the way of amenities, but that they were getting a Carmel location for at least $200,000 less than any other house in the neighborhood.

On the issue of offering housing to a broader market, Rypkema concludes that "to try to accommodate every market in the need of housing would . . . diminish the sustainable value of the community as a whole."

"Should families be welcome here?" he asks. "Of course. But the family choosing to buy here should adjust their style of life to the pattern of Carmel and not expect the community to revise an 80-year urban design tradition to meet the needs of what a 1998 family thinks it has to have."

Historic preservation

Part of Rypkema's analysis looks at the importance of historic preservation in Carmel. He argues that the exceedingly high value of external components of value in Carmel clearly show that historic preservation is essential to the maintenance of overall value.

According to Rypkema, historic preservation raises many concerns among property owners. These concerns, Rypkema states, combine two threads: first, historic requirements "could adversely affect property values and diminish marketability." Second, "houses that potentially could be designated as 'historic'" generated comments like these:

- "Those old houses are about to fall down; it isn't feasible to save them."
- "It's only the termites that keeps some of those houses standing."
- "Some of those places are so small that there's no way they can meet today's market demands or building codes."
- "Most of those old places are just an eyesore."
- "I can understand designating important historic buildings but these are just ordinary houses."

Preservation as a "store" of value

Rypkema agrees that all of the above are legitimate concerns. He argues, however, that these same objections were voiced in other areas that have been designated as historic such as the townhouses in Georgetown and Dupont Circle in Washington D.C.; the Upper East Side brownstones in New York; adobe houses in Santa Fe; the Victorian painted ladies in San Francisco. It would be hard to argue that this preservation work was not valuable to the public at large as well as the homeowners in those areas.

Rypkema adds that none of the older Carmel houses are of the "George Washington slept here" or the "San Simeon" type historic property. But the older homes are, he continues, "very much part of the fabric of Carmel and contribute much to the character of the community." Finally, he concludes that "Carmel will be poorer if its historic resources are lost." In essence he is saying that historic preservation is a "store of value" for the community and individual property owners

Fear of historic preservation

Carmel has a list of houses and buildings that are considered historic. There is a lot of fear within the real estate community and among home owners of historically significant properties that this listing can have serious, negative economic consequences. There is little understanding of how the process works and what the positives and negatives may be for the individual home owner.

In next week's article we will address the historic preservation process and attempt to explain exactly how it works.

Affordable housing in Pebble Beach: who will get it?

PINE CONE STAFF REPORT

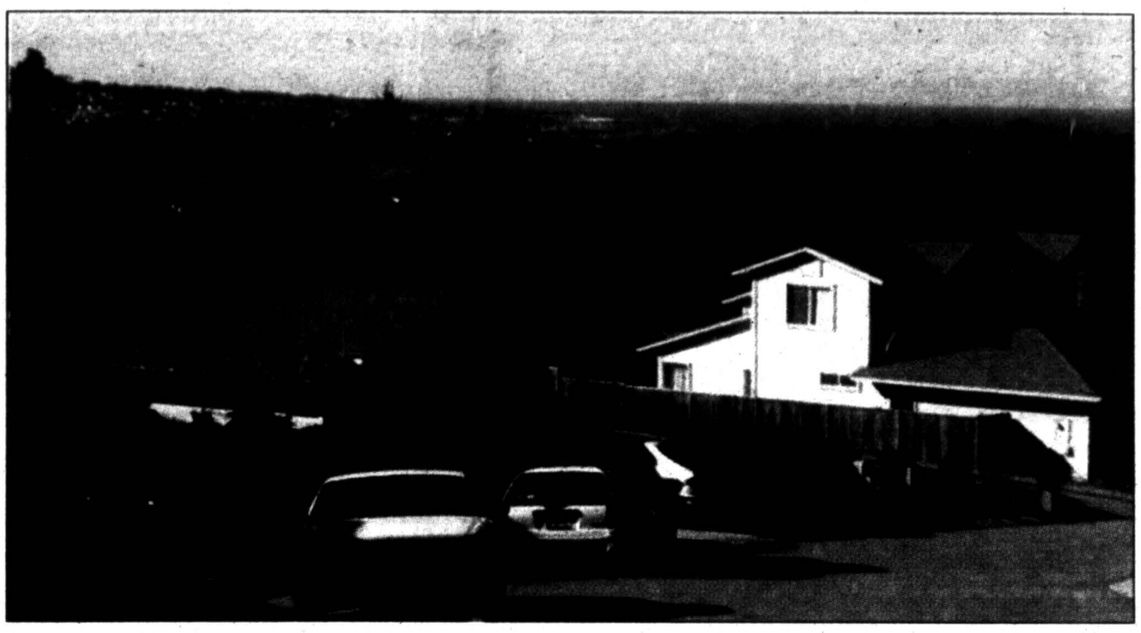
LAST MONTH, Monterey County planners recommended that 53 affordable townhomes be built inside Del Monte Forest as part of the Pebble Beach Co.'s development and open space plan.

If the homes are built, they will be sold to "moderate income" buyers who otherwise would probably never have a chance to live inside Monterey County's most exclusive neighborhood.

"The county sets the income level to qualify, but it's up to us to decide who the buyers can be," Pebble Beach Company Executive V.P. Mark Stilwell said.

To cut down on traffic and pollution, Stilwell said he hopes the buyers will be Pebble Beach Company employees and staff from Robert Louis Stevenson School. "The whole point is to provide some housing for people who work in the area," he said, adding that the homes will probably sell for less than $200,000.

The P.B. plan is slowly working its way through the permit process and probably won't be approved for several years — if ever. That gives people who want a shot at one of the homes plenty of time to start their career at RLS or the Pebble Beach Co.



These beautiful "inclusionary" homes at Monterra Ranch — many with gorgeous views of Monterey Bay — went for $168,000 to 42 lucky families who moved in last year. Competition to get similar, affordable homes in Pebble Beach is likely to be fierce.

Carmel's Crown Jewel

Spectacular Scenic road masterpiece. This artfully constructed, immaculate home was built by Chris Tescher less than ten years ago and greatly enhanced by its current owners. A charming Cotswolds cottage on the outside, with a clever design that incorporates four bedrooms, each with its own bath, in 2200 square feet of luxurious living space. Then there are the views...

Quite possibly this home has some of the best views out there of world famous Carmel Beach. The home sits well above the street so that the full expanse of the beach, from Point Lobos to all of Pebble Beach, is before you. The waves crashing on the beach, the pelicans and dolphins splashing in the water, the dogs chasing the seas gulls, the surfers shooting the curl, one glorious sunset after another – it all plays out on the big screen in front of you.

Finally, the location and the exposure are key elements that add to the value of this unique home. This home is so light and bright and the sun shines on the private interior patio almost all day long. And although you may never want to leave this place, when you do, you will be in short walking distance to the internationally acclaimed dining and shopping of Carmel-by-the-Sea and steps from the white sands of Carmel Beach.
